

CaseBriefKit Template Pack Preview

A public preview of possible editable DOCX and printable PDF study files for law school case briefs.

What this preview is

This is not the full pack and it is not a purchase receipt. It shows the file types being tested so students can decide whether the expanded set would save enough time to request.

Possible pack contents

Case brief template Fillable DOCX and printable PDF for facts, issue, rule, analysis, holding, reasoning, and class notes.	Class notes and outline template Connect assigned cases with doctrine, professor questions, and later outline material.
Completed fictional example A worked sample so students can compare a blank form with a finished brief.	Cold-call prep sheet A compact page for facts, posture, holding, reasoning, and likely follow-up questions.
IRAC / FIRAC / CREAC quick templates Short structures for different class habits and professor preferences.	Issue spotting checklist A bridge from daily case reading to exam-style issue recognition.
Professor preference adapter A simple sheet for recording what a professor rewards or dislikes in briefs.	Google Docs copy helper A quick-copy structure for students who prefer cloud documents over local Word files.

Free sample vs. expanded pack

The free sample is a single one-page case brief form. The expanded pack would add multiple study templates, examples, and class workflow sheets if real students request it.

How to signal interest

Try the free DOCX or PDF first, then use the template pack interest form on the website if these files would be useful enough to buy later.

CaseBriefKit is an educational writing aid for law students. It is not legal advice. Do not send private study records, school IDs, or sensitive personal information through public feedback links.